Product assumptions and constraints

The software that we are developing for Alypsis Essential Oils will have very basic assumptions of the user and constraints. Some of the assumptions that will be made by our team when developing this software are that the user has an internet connection and basic keyboard and mouse skills. The majority of constraints within the software will derive from the API's capabilities from the different databases being used, for example, the ability to see an updated product list, etc. Other than those constraints we will be limited to a simple, non-complex program with easily accessible features such as adding a product or removing one so that we are able to establish a user-friendly interface.
